

Paphinia (Majestic x cristata)

Paphinia herrerae (photograph by Patricia Harding)

Paphinia cristata (photograph from OWZ Library)

X

=

Paphinia Majestic (cristata x herrerae) (photograph by Lois Cinert)

Then, (Paphinia Majestic X Paphinia cristata)

Grown and photographed by M & K Sanborn

Sometime last year, Sarah Pratt felt sorry for me because I did not win anything at the GPJC raffle—so sorry that she gave me this little hybrid that she had won. My first inclination was to “crow” about being able to keep it alive and get it to bloom; then, after researching the plant’s parentage, I decided to share my findings☺☹. According to the research, this plant should be grown:

Warm to hot temperatures

Low light (no direct sun)

80-90% humidity

Good drainage

I grow this one along with my Draculas and it is potted in sphagnum moss.

Karlene Sanborn